Toyota Motor Corporation provided an update regarding its investigation into the impact of Kobe Steel's announcements about data falsification. In today's update, Toyota confirmed that, after reviewing the potential impacts related to specified additional Kobe materials, the quality and performance of its vehicles satisfy our internal standards.

The investigation into the potential impact of additional materials continues, and Toyota has stated the need for additional time to complete its investigations because some of the other materials (listed in the table) were purchased via numerous suppliers and used for various vehicle components.
