

Toyota and Biodiversity – Operating in Harmony with Nature

December 15, 2020

Image not found or type unknown

Biodiversity is a big deal to Toyota. That's why we support conservation initiatives by partnering with nonprofits and local communities to make a difference on our sites and beyond.

Across North America, Toyota is supporting native species and pollinators including butterflies, bees, birds and bats. In this video you will see how Toyota is helping monarch butterflies by offering these colorful commuters several pollinator "pit stops" at 17 sites along their migration path south in the Fall and north in the Spring.

You can find more information on our biodiversity education page.