

There's Only One Planet Earth

April 15, 2021

Mobility is an important sector, and the ability to get from one place to another is as necessary today as it was centuries ago. As a result, companies in the transportation industry must engage in a sustainable transition to support climate action. Toyota has placed sustainability at the heart of its operations and decision making. This film explores Toyota's electrification approach, through its commitment to providing electrified alternatives to all its vehicles by 2025 in the United States.

To learn more, visit www.50climateleaders.com.